Investment in a Downturn

According to recent research, organisations who do not invest in their people are twice as likely to fail as those that do. In previous downturns those that invested in people development showed the most dynamic recovery. It is more important than ever to make sure that you and your colleagues are communicating as effectively as possible, leadership skills are tip top and that individuals are working well as a team and feel valued. Whilst it is of course harder to justify expense in the current climate, consider the difference it can make between success and failure. Whether you are looking at training for yourself personally or for your organisation, the investment really can make a difference.

We are currently running a number of leadership and management skills workshops for different organisations. These are either bespoke to meet particular needs of the organisation, or are aligned to Chartered Management Institute national standards. The latter allows individuals to achieve an award, certificate or diploma at Level 3 (First Line management), Level 5 (Management and Leadership) or Level 7 (Strategic Management and Leadership), depending on their learning programme. Why not ask what we can do for your organisation?

NEW Website

We are really pleased to be able to tell you that our new site is now live. Take a look at www.dmsconsultants.com and let us know what you think. We're working on Phase two now so tell us what changes or additions you'd like to see and if there's anything you'd find particularly useful on the site so that we can consider it for the next version.

For You and For Your Organisation

Many of you come to DMS because you want to do an HR or Management qualification with us. We also offer a number of other products and services for both you and your organisation, as shown in the image below. We'll tell you more about these over the coming months. In the meantime, if you'd like to know how we can help you in any of these areas, get in touch and ask for our new leaflet or arrange a FREE no-obligation chat with us.

DMS Academy
